Hugh Alfred Ayres, Papers, 1861-1896.
- Papers include correspondence and writings of Alfred Ayres during his service as Captain of Company H, 78th Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteers. The letters were written to his wife and describe the battles of Chickamauga (Ga.), Chattanooga (Tenn.), his support of Gen. Rosecrans' order forbidding railroad travel of women in the South, and his impressions of the state of the Union Army while fighting in the South. Writings include two drafts of a verse poem and a prose reminiscence describing the Battle of Dallas (Ga.) in 1864, also known as New Hope Church. Also included is Ayres' discharge certificate from the 13th Regiment of the Pennsylvania Volunteers in 1861. Hugh Alfred (Alf) Ayres was born in Butler, Pennsylvania and served with the 13th and 78th Regiments of Pennsylvania Volunteers during the Civil War. He married Elizabeth Kerr in 1861 and returned to Butler after the war. Ayres held political offices in Butler and worked in merchandising and the oil industry after the war.

  - This collection contains correspondence of Martin Seel as well as genealogical material created by the donors of the collection. Most of the letters are addressed to his brother, Georg Seel who was a farmer in the Shaler, Pa. area. In addition to a picture of the daily life of a soldier, the letters show his attempts to stay involved in his family life. They also reflect his growing disappointment with the Army because the German units were much maligned for their performance at Chancellorsville and Gettysburg. Martin enlisted in the Union Army during the Civil War and was mustered in to the service on September 14, 1861 as a Private in Company I of the 74th Pennsylvania Regiment. This unit saw action in the Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Second Manassas, Chancellorsville and Gettysburg. In August 1864 the unit was sent to South Carolina where it participated in the siege of Charleston. In September 1864 the regiment was returned to Washington where Martin was mustered out on September 15, 1865.
