Mollie Brunwasser collection 1884-2006, 1950-1975 (bulk)

The Mollie Brunwasser Collection, housed in five boxes, is divided into two series.

The first series consists of diaries, amounting to 43 volumes. In addition to the 43 volumes, there are 3 unbound diaries that do not specifically state the order in which they fall within the rest of the volumes. However, with the sequential numbering of each diary entry, the unbounded diaries appear to follow after volume 57.

The second series contains a Brunwasser family history completed by History Center staff and accompanying research notes. The diaries appear to have been written, based on dates and events in the entries, between the early 1950s and mid-1970s. The books are a mix of autobiography, family history, transcripts of correspondence between family members, copies of newspaper articles and books, and sketches. Stamps, correspondence, photos and mementos have been glued into the pages of the diaries as well. In the early volumes, M.B. vividly recounts her childhood in turn of the century Pittsburgh, depicting the residents and businesses of the various neighborhoods she lived in as a child. She describes life in the Jewish community, as well as interactions between her family and Irish, Polish, and Chinese immigrants. Based on conversations with her father and uncles, M.B. also traces the history of the Brunwasser family and writes of the history of Jews in Pittsburgh. The entries occasionally include contemporaneous accounts of life in Pittsburgh, some of which reflect on changes the city went through during the early years of Renaissance I. The later volumes contain many pages of verbatim copies of published material, including newspaper articles and books. The collection contains only volumes 1-22, 41-57, and the 3 unbound diaries, suggesting that some of the books were never transferred to the History Center.

The second series is comprised of a family history of Albert H. Brunwasser (A.H.B.), M.B.'s nephew, as well as accompanying research notes. Jennifer Kaye and Kerin Shellenbarger of the Heinz History Center worked on the project between 2004 and 2006, using M.B.'s diaries as their primary source of information. The family history covers the Brunwassers as well as the family of A.H.B.'s mother, the Goldbergs. This series contains notes, photocopied census records, newspaper articles, and obituaries, as well as correspondence from Arthur Brunwasser, A.H.B.'s cousin, which documents his own genealogical research efforts.
